

EKATERINA SKY

Visual Artist · Speaker · Architect of Impact Art as Methodology

"I define impact art not as a genre but as a methodology one that recognizes aesthetic production as inseparable from ecological and cultural consequence."

ABOUT

Ekaterina Sky is a visual artist based in Los Angeles whose practice explores the relationship between humanity, spirituality, and the natural world. Her work spans painting, muralism, public installation, and socially engaged community art. She is the founder of Prayer for the Earth, an ongoing series in watercolor and 24K sustainable gold leaf that transcribes a universal prayer for the planet into visual form, and the architect of Impact Art as a methodology. Her work has been presented at COP30 (United Nations), Carnegie Hall, the LA Climate Week opening ceremony, Coral Gables Museum at Miami Art Week, and the ImmoBilium global tour alongside works by de Kooning, Pollock, and Rothko.

TALKS

Forests of the World

A meditation on rainforests, witness, and what an image can hold that a statistic cannot.

Impact Art as Methodology

Beauty as cultural infrastructure, not cultural ornament.

Prayer for the Earth

Participatory authorship, sealed intentions, collective stewardship.
